If you wish to create translated files then you should NOT put them in the 'en' subdirectory as that is reserved for the English translations. You need to create a separate subdirectory for each language, such as 'fr' for French, 'es' for Spanish or 'de' for German. This allows several translations to be available at the same time. At run time it is the user's language, as provided in $_SERVER["HTTP_ACCEPT_LANGUAGE"], which identifies which subdirectory to use.

The 'sys.language_*.inc' files must ONLY exist in the 'menu' directory. These are system-wide messages whereas everything else is reserved for a particular subsystem.
