PDF documents produced on my local environmnet are working fine, but after publishing to an external web site Adobe Reader gives the following error when producing PDF output:

"Adode Reader could not open 'Acr51.tmp' because it is either not a supported file type or becasue the file has been damaged (for example, it was sent as an email attachment and wasn't correctly decoded)."

As the same machine is being used to access both locally and remotely this would suggest the problem is not the local version of Adobe.

Is there something that needs to be set within the web server that may be causing this?
