I'm afraid I've discovered a new bug since the addition of the Role functionality (always a problem adding something as an afterthought!)

If you create a message with NO role id (i.e. for all roles) and then login with a role that has not been given access to the Show task (other than the Global role) the system tries to display the message and crashes, rather than ignoring the fact that you don't have access and not trying to display the screen.

I discovered this because I forgot to give task access!!
