Although it is possible to copy a (dot)htaccess file using an FTP client, it is not possible to create or rename a file in Windows that has an extension but no name. I have tried in Windows XP and Windows 7.

As for creating an automated installation process, it may be possible, but I just don't have the time.

I keep all the files for each subsystem in a separate subsystem directory. I don't like having files for different subsystems in the same directory.
