And the end is, as always: ME STUPID.

From the dict and menu databases I could see that the last time I successfully added a relationship was 2012-12-09, I then decided to thoroughly read through the notes to each version starting with version 1.76 and, indeed, found this point

Â· updated the data dictionary to include screens to view relationship details from the child to its parents as well as from the parent to its children.You will need to run script 'dict.menu_export(2012-06-23).sql' in order to update the contents of your menu database.

I missed it, because I usually update 2-4 version in a row and the other sql updates in that version are at the top of the text. It was a little bit hidden --- yes, I vainly try to excuse myself -- but running it of couse made this single problem disappear.

This is of course not of any use for future reference, but I post it anyway as unsolved questions have an irritating air around them.

Thank your for your informative replies, and sorry for taking your time.
