Hi,

I was using Radicore in Windows XP and everything was ok.
Thus, I decided to install it on an Ubuntu server:
ubuntu: 10.04
mysql: 5.1.41-3ubuntu12.6 (Ubuntu)
PHP Version 5.3.2-1ubuntu4.7
apache2

I have 2 problems:

1. although I changed .htaccess as described in the installation, the PHP would not include the Radicore path. Thus, I had to extend the include path in php.ini and seems to work. I attach the .htaccess file, maybe I do something wrong...

2. after "solving" step 1, I still get an error from the framework (Fatal Error: mysqli_connect(): Cannot connect to database '%1$s'..). Is in the second part of the attached file.

Thanks!

The file you have provided is called (dot)htaccess(dot)txt, which is invalid. On *nix systems it is called (dot)htaccess, but as this name is not valid on Windows I have documented the procedure necessary to use htaccess(dot)txt instead. It could be that this problem with the htaccess file has caused the wrong config.inc file to be loaded, and this has supplied the wrong value to the mysqli_connect() function.

Hi,

Is not deployed on Windows, but on Ubuntu (Debian Linux). Thus, I assume it has to be (dot)htaccess.

Now, is working, I did a change in the config.inc (dbprefix to be null):

ORIGINAL

_____

} else {
    // this is for my shared web host
    $GLOBALS['dbusername'] = 'dan';
    $GLOBALS['dbuserpass'] = 'password';
    $GLOBALS['dbprefix']   = '*';
```

_____

_____

} else {
    // this is for my shared web host
    $GLOBALS['dbusername'] = 'dan';
    $GLOBALS['dbuserpass'] = 'password';
    $GLOBALS['dbprefix']   = null;

... sorry is true: I provided .htaccess.txt (just saved it in Notepad on my Windows laptop), but on Ubuntu is .htaccess as in your instructions...
